COMMENTS/QUESTIONS:

I don't not believe you should build here. The area is relatively organic and a lower impact than S500 home would be.

The area is actually less scared than I imagined. It's ~~entirely~~ what I would imagine it would look like as I stand at the high point on the Red Rock Science Loop. Just disturbed earth, not a big deal, ~~unlike~~ green lawns and glowing roof tops.

I recognize the issue must be dealt with. But there is not the answer. There are plenty of money in NY that are not slated to be homes. We should not develop!

COMMENTS/QUESTIONS:

Will Congress in October that would give the kids out the "rehabilitation" of (L.A. kids) and send the children out.
Part, too is dangerous enough.
I didn't intend the "love" words of the words in the end.
Some also talked about environment of the world around us?
Are they going to be guided together and taken away?
Unless they don't want to stop. Is there any possibility you will, had anyone? (to go)
Is it still just about the almighty Dollar?

COMMENTS/QUESTIONS:

"You have minimized the impact on the 'Viewshed' - you can see the mine from every spot on the scenic loop, from the trails, from the peaks."

Houses are not reclamation. The BLM may have approved this, but it was not approved by State. Therefore, a non-issue.

COMMENTS/QUESTIONS:

TWO CONCERNS : Red Rock Canyon (RRC) has been likened as the "Lake Tahoe of southern Nevada," thus qualifying RRC for statewide attention. Of course RRC is a major natural area for all of Clark County. Therefore, any development that would impinge on RRC faces extra scrutiny. Your handout ("Issue: Red Rock Canyon") addresses these concerns. The first problem, to me, would be any visual intrusion onto the RRC area. The handout claims, "minimal visual impact on the conservation area, and the property cannot be seen from Blue Diamond, Calico Basin or the Las Vegas Valley." Explaining the degree of the visual impact and providing site renderings from various viewpoints would help define & explain this issue. Little or no visual impact equals little or no reason for concern. A second problem would be traffic volume generated by construction & occupancy. The tour guide said that no traffic would go thru RRC (160 ?). He said that Tropicana would extend up to the project and then use a tunnel to reach the development site. A bold and hard to imagine route. No traffic in RRC from the development would be another requirement. As far as I am concerned, as long as there is essentially no visual intrusion onto RRC and no traffic (construction or homeowners) on the RRC road (160 ?) the project should get a green-light. Any remaining problems are either misapplied jurisdictional concerns or attempts to slow and stop growth via obstructionism. Note: to the degree that your project demands additional public funds, beyond what would normally occur at a Valley location, due to the additional elevation (2,500 feet), should be taken on by the project.
