AN ACT relating to domestic violence; revising the qualifications for a master appointed by a court to take testimony and recommend orders in actions concerning orders for protection against domestic violence; and providing other matters properly relating thereto.

Legislative Counsel's Digest:

Existing law authorizes a court to appoint a person as a master to take testimony and recommend orders in cases involving restraining orders to protect against domestic violence. To qualify for appointment as a master, a person must be a licensed attorney in Nevada. (NRS 33.019) In contrast, existing law provides the qualifications for justices of the peace and only requires that a justice of the peace be a licensed attorney if the justice serves in a county with a population of 400,000 or more and then, only in a township within the county which has a population of 100,000 or more. In a county with a population of less than 400,000, a justice of the peace is only required to be a licensed attorney in a township within the county which has a population of 250,000 or more. (NRS 4.010)

This bill revises the qualifications for a master so that a master must possess the same qualifications as those required to serve as a justice of the peace. Thus, a master is only required to be a licensed attorney in those townships in which a justice of the peace is required to be a licensed attorney.
