AN ACT relating to domestic relations; revising the provisions concerning the presumption that joint custody is in the best interest of a minor child; and providing other matters properly relating thereto.

Legislative Counsel's Digest:

Under existing law, until a court orders otherwise, married parents have joint legal custody of their children. (NRS 125.465) In addition, existing law provides that the best interest of a child must be the sole consideration of the court in determining the custody of a child. (NRS 125.480) Existing law also establishes a presumption that when both parents agree to joint custody, joint custody is in the best interest of a child. (NRS 125.490)

This bill makes the presumption that joint custody is in the best interest of the child applicable even if both parents do not agree to joint custody. However, the presumption does not apply if a parent has been convicted of certain crimes or has committed acts of domestic violence.
