

Senate Bill No. 137—Committee on Judiciary

CHAPTER.....

AN ACT relating to the Division of Parole and Probation of the Department of Public Safety; expanding the list of persons who may conduct investigations of certain persons being considered for probation and who may verify certain information relating to the economic hardship of a person placed on probation to include all employees of the Division; providing that upon entry of an order of probation a person is deemed accepted for probation and must submit a signed document concerning the conditions of his probation to the Division; providing that all information obtained in the discharge of official duty by an employee of the Division is privileged; and providing other matters properly relating thereto.

Legislative Counsel's Digest:

Existing law requires a parole and probation officer to conduct an investigation of a defendant being considered for probation before the defendant is placed on probation. (NRS 176A.200) Under certain circumstances, a person placed on probation may be granted an honorable discharge from probation by order of the court. One such circumstance is when the person placed on probation has demonstrated his fitness for honorable discharge but because of economic hardship, which must be verified by a parole and probation officer, has been unable to make restitution as ordered by the court. (NRS 176A.850)

This bill expands the list of persons who may conduct such investigations and who may verify information relating to the economic hardship of a person placed on probation to include all employees of the Division of Parole and Probation of the Department of Public Safety, not just parole and probation officers.

Existing law requires a person to submit a signed document concerning the conditions of his probation to the Division of Parole and Probation before the person may be accepted for probation. (NRS 176A.210)

This bill provides that upon entry of an order by the court, a person is deemed accepted for probation and must submit a signed document concerning the conditions of his probation to the Division of Parole and Probation.

Existing law provides that all information obtained in the discharge of official duty by a parole and probation officer is privileged and may not be disclosed to anyone other than certain persons entitled to receive such information unless otherwise ordered by the State Board of Parole Commissioners or a judge or unless it is necessary to perform the duties of the Division of Parole and Probation. (NRS 213.1075)

This bill provides that all information obtained in the discharge of official duty by an employee of the Division of Parole and Probation is privileged, not just the information obtained by parole and probation officers.
