

Senate Bill No. 34–Committee on Judiciary

CHAPTER.....

AN ACT relating to protective orders; revising the provisions governing additional penalties imposed for certain violations of orders for the protection of children; revising the jurisdiction of certain justice courts with respect to the issuance of orders for protection against domestic violence; and providing other matters properly relating thereto.

Legislative Counsel's Digest:

Existing law imposes an additional penalty on a person who commits certain felonies when violating certain types of protective orders. (NRS 193.166) Section 1 of this bill provides that a person who intentionally violates an extended order for the protection of a child, which is a felony, is not subject to the additional penalty unless the person committed an additional felony when the person violated the order. (NRS 33.400)

Existing law provides that justice courts have jurisdiction to issue orders for protection against domestic violence, except in certain counties and townships or when certain actions are pending in district court. (NRS 4.370) Instead of the exception for certain pending action, section 2 of this bill provides that a justice court does not have jurisdiction to issue an order for protection against domestic violence if a district court issues a written order to the justice court requiring that further proceedings relating to the action for the issuance of the order of protection be conducted before the district court.
