AN ACT relating to real property; providing that a tenant may give a landlord a surety bond, or a combination of a surety bond and other security, instead of a security deposit under certain circumstances; providing that upon termination of a landlord's interest in the property, the successor in interest must accept the tenant's security or surety bond; and providing other matters properly relating thereto.

Legislative Counsel's Digest:

Existing law requires a landlord and a tenant to perform certain obligations with respect to a lease of real property. As part of a lease, a landlord may demand a tenant provide security for the tenant's obligations, such as: (1) payment of rent; (2) repairing damage to the premises; and (3) cleaning the dwelling. (NRS 118A.240-118A.250)

Section 2 of this bill provides that, instead of requiring a security deposit, a landlord may allow a tenant to provide the landlord with a surety bond, or a combination of a surety bond and other security, to cover the amount of security demanded by the landlord. This section also: (1) provides that a landlord is not required to accept a surety bond; (2) provides that a landlord may not require a tenant to provide a surety bond in place of security; and (3) imposes a duty on the tenant to ensure the surety bond remains in effect. (NRS 118A.242)

Section 3 of this bill requires, at the termination of the landlord's interest in the dwelling unit under certain circumstances, that the successor in interest accept the tenant's security or surety bond, or a combination thereof, and prohibits the successor in interest from demanding additional security or surety during the term of the rental agreement. (NRS 118A.244)

Section 1 of this bill amends the existing definition of security to provide that a payment made to a licensed surety to secure a surety bond is not security for the purposes of determining security given to a landlord. (NRS 188A.240)
